Interview with David Owen. David Owen. In your new book, " Green Metropolis: Why Living Smaller, Living Closer, and Driving Less are the Keys to Sustainability ," you argue that New York City is one of the most sustainable cities in the U.S. because of its high population density. While NYC is one of the world's largest cities, per capita fuel usage is low – people walk, bike, or use public transportation instead of relying on cars.

Interview with David Owen | asla.org

At first glance, it would certainly seem logical that city-living is the greener option - if it is, indeed, an option. Surrounded by public transport, you don't need to own a car. And by living in...
