Love Power And Justice Paul

When love, power and justice are separated in a situation, it becomes unstable. "Being" (or God) is the power that drives the situation toward stability--that is, toward a situation where love, power and justice are in balance. In life, the attempt to achieve this balance is dynamic, ever-changing, shifting--sometimes creating a worsening situation, sometimes one that's improving. A Hitler may gain immense power (divorced from justice) in the short-term. Eventually, forces of resistance ...

With Paul Tillich we have an interpretation of love and justice that is closer to that of Rauschenbusch, insofar as both reject a stark antithesis between the two concepts, but Tillich's analysis also differs in dramatic ways from Rauschenbusch. Tillich's methodology is reflected in the structure of Love, Power, and Justice. After identifying problematic "confusions" in popular understandings of each of the three concepts, Tillich's next three chapters offer "an ontology" of ...

Paul Tillich's easily approachable volume Love, Power, and Justice: Ontological Analyses and Ethical Applications was originally conceived of as a pair of lecture series (the Firth lectures in Nottingham, England and the Sprunt lectures at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Virginia) and a small seminar Tillich taught at Princeton. It reads quickly and its chapters possess the steady flow of thoughts that a good lecturer should present his audience.

Justice is not in conflict with love because love leads to creative justice, the application of which leads to a personalized realization of self and reunion. Power is not in conflict because compulsion and force may only be used so long as the identity of both parties are further realized by the creative interaction and not destroyed or dis-integrated.

Metaphysically speaking, love, power, and justice cannot be derived from anything that is. They have ontological dignity. "In Plato, we find the doctrine of eros as the power which drives to the union with the true and the good itself. In his interpretation of the ideas as the essences of everything, he sees them as the 'powers of being.'
